The nursery school program provides a child-centered, developmentally appropriate early childhood environment that supports children's emerging language, literacy, cognitive, physical, and social skills. Because preschoolers learn best through active engagement with their world, the nursery school classroom provides opportunities to explore and manipulate materials in a variety of interest areas. Children are encouraged to investigate, ask questions, draw conclusions and make discoveries in centers which offer diverse options for learning. Centers with a focus on Dramatic Play, Block Play, Art, Science, Social Studies, Math and Language Arts promote the development of initiative and independence, and present children with an array of appealing choices for exploration. Interactions with peers and adults assist them in developing the ability to think critically, work cooperatively and problem-solve about relevant, meaningful content.
